T is proposed to establish in Shanghai a Limited Banking Company, with the above title, in the belief that there is not only room, but actual necessity, for the additional facilities which such an institution will afford to the large local, coasting, and foreign trade which centres in this port.

The great extension of steam communication both by sen and river, and the creation of telegraphic connections, since the existing Local Bank was founded, have greatly added to the importance of Shanghai, until it has become the great depot or distributing point for the trade of Northern and Central China; but, while it seems desirable that Shanghai should be the head-quarters of the new Bank, and its direction on the spot where the principal interests are involved, a local Committee will be formed in Hongkong for the promotion of the undertaking there. The success of other public companies in Shanghai and Hongkong, and the evidence of a large sum of money seeking investment in China, encourage the belief that the proposed Capital for this Bank will be readily subscribed; many influential native merchants have already come forward as active prometers and supporters of the undertaking, and the Committee look for a very valuable constituency from Chinese The legal constitution of the Bank is engaging the consideration of the Committee, and reference has been made to London and elsewhere for the best legal advice upon the subject; and it is understood that no Shares will be alloted, nor will operations be commenced until the necessary arrangements have been completed, when further information will be laid before intending Shareholders. In the mean. time, applications for shares are invited, until the 15th April, 1872, but must be on

VERY MODERATE RATES OF PREMIUM, BASED ON RELIABLE TABLES OF MORTALITY.

It is estimated that the Invested Funds of this Company, in proportion to ils Liabilities, exceed those of any other Assurance Company established in China. The rate of Mortality assumed at the Life Valuation in 1867 was the "Experience" Table, which requires a larger reserve to be made than any other Table in general use; the rate of interest assumed was only 3 per cent. thus leaving a large margin of profit; and the net or risk premiums were alone taken into account leaving a further margin for expenses and

This Company's Accounts are drawn up and published in the form prescribed by the Life Assurance Company's Act of 1870. For Forms of Proposal, and further information, apply to Hongkong, March 13th, 1872.

WE reprinted in yesterday's paper the repor of a very interesting case which came up under appeal to the Supreme Court at Shanghai from the Provincial Court at Foochow. The substance of the case was that of these delightful programmes. Messrs. Westray, Gibbs & Co., of New York, obtained a judgment in the Supreme Court of that City against Mr. FORSTER, of Messrs. JOHN FORSTER & Co., the well known firm in Foochow, for the sum of $50,000, as the amount due in account between the parties one of the soldiers of the 10th Regiment, who Messrs. WESTRAY accordingly applied through their agents, Messrs. GILMAN & Co., to have the judgment enforced through the British Consular Court at Foochow: and the case came on towards the close of 1871, when the Consul at Foochow, upon the ground that the case had been irregularly brought forward in New York, refused to grant the application, taking the judgment of the Supreme Court, New York, only as evidence of the history of the transactions instead of as proof of the debt,

From this decision an appeal was made to the Supreme Court at Shanghai, and after carefully hearing the arguments on both sides, Mr. Justice Goodwin reversed the de- the engineers' department of the steamship it southwest of Lan-chau-fu, the capital of the cision of the Court below, and ordered the enforcement of the judgment obtained in New York. His decision sets forth in a the steamship Danube with several pairs of shoes Ho chan is known, even in Europe, as the place and clear form the rules which govern the enforcement of the judgments foreign Courts, and is of importance as it will of his queue and prevented him from going the Imperial troops under Tso-kung-pan, and no doubt form a precedent on the point in the Supreme Court for China and Japan, and be binding upon the Provincial Courts. He shows that in an ordinary way an English Court will accept a judgment of a foreign tribunal as evidence of debt, and that to prevent its doing so it must be shown that the judgment was obtained either by fraud or that it is clearly contrary to natural justice. In the case under notice, the Provincial Court at Foothow seems to have been under the impression from the evidence which it had before it, that the Defendant had not been a party to the suit in New York, and could not in consequence bring forward in the Supreme Court there a counter claim which it considered he had: How the Foochow Court arrived at this decision in face of the evidence in the whole plainant, and were further fined $5 each. case seems a little difficult to comprehend; but it may possibly be accounted for by the evidence in the Court below not having been taken so strictly as in the Subreme Court at Shanghai. At all events, there appears no doubt from the evidence taken as a whole of the gang who cleaned out the station. that the Defendant did appear, as we read that an answer was put in to the suit by a Mr. WARD, as attorney for the defendant, from instructions given to him by that gentleman himself. Under the circumstance there was nothing in the nature of obtaining a judgment without notice, summons or at 5 p.m. of the 11th instant. similar proceeding, the only ground except fraud which can detract from the force of a foreign Court, and upon this basis Mr. GOODWIN gave his decision. The chief argument urged against this decision was that bangle. He was selling matches, and the com-Mr. Forster had been prevented by an unfortunate accident from going into the merits of the case in New York, having asked his brother to watch over his interests, and the brother having died before the case came forward. But the answer to this would seem before the cognisance of the Supreme Court in New York for their decision as to whother it formed a valid ground for postponing or refusing to hear the case. If the matter was not urged upon their notice it was the fault of the defendant, as he was represented by Counsel, who must be presumed to have ciothing, whilst on the road to their native tions what was necessary in the matter. If. the point being represented, the Court in then it would be, as it were, invading the jurisdiction of the Court at which the matter was first decided, to go behind the judgment and say that it had given a wrong decision. The Foochow Court acted with consistency, though erroneously, in holding that because the defendant was not a party to the case,

defendant was represented by Counsel instructed by himself, it would clearly be subversive of the ordinary principles applicable to the reception of foreign judg. ments to refuse to do-so in this ists, and is a serious affair for this dynasty. I case, on the ground that the New York Court | the military mandarin at the head of Li-hunghad not given sufficient apportunity for the chang's southern prmy, called Woo, had, defendant to be represented, and had in fact decided the case without a due regard to the interests of justice. This principle would to law, the Tientein mandarin drew up lead to the reopening of every case on which to the justice of the case.

is of special importance in the Supreme and Provincial Courts in China, where on account of the exterritoriality arrangement judgments from foreign Courts are likely at all times to form part of proceedings in connection with debts; and it must be manifest. that any principle which would make it easy to reopen a case already decided at any of the Consular tribunals upon other than very strong grounds, such as those instanced namely, that the judgment was obtained either by fraud or by means clearly contrary to natural justice, would lead to endless confusion and uncertainty.

Mr. Heller had more wonders in store for his benefit last night, but everything was surpassed by the ingenious trick with the Silver Rings, which was repeated. The ease with which he acparates and puts them together is very astonishing, particularly as any mechanical contrivances in the rings are so concealed that he considers it safe to pass them all round for inspection by the audience. That perplexing hat performed again in a most mysterious way, so many things being taken out of it that for want of time, and convenient space to dispose of them, it was absolutely necessary to impose a limit on its productiveness. submerged, and lying on her face in about two feet of water. The body was lifted out, Wilber helping quietly, and carried to the mill. It was frightfully lacerated, and the clothing, even to the under garments, torn to shreds. Wilber prohibition had been caused by an article en showed no agitation, but was silent, as if dazed After the corpse was placed in the mill, he started back on foot to tell Miss Devoc's parents of what had occurred; and returned with the dead girl's father, after walking ten miles, al about four in the morning. On the Monday following Wilber attended the funeral, and afterward returned to his home. Now the question is, how did Miss Devoe come by her death? The boly was found two hundred feet from where the marks in the snow show the girl was thrown out. The wounds on the corpse and the condition of the clothing were totally incompatible with the theory of a single fall and concussion. Besides this, blood and bits of clothing were subsequently found between the two places. Yet Mrs. Proper saw the buggy traverse just this intervening space with the man alone in it. Again, footprinte, were found along the side of the road extending from the spot where Miss Devoe pitched out, or was supposed to have pitched out, for about twelve feet. Then there -as a track, or trail, as if a body had been dragged under or behind the buggy. At the junction of two roads, a little further on, a pile of lumber stands, and around this the body of the girl must have been, by the signs on the snow, twice dragged. That the buggy was amashed, as Wilber said, there could be no doubt. The facts spoke for themselves. But there was, and is, a doubt whether or nothe assassinated Miss Devoe first, and then carried out the ensuing scene by way of accounting for her denth. If we suppose, no has been suggested, that the young woman was onught by some extraordinary accident and swang under the buggy without Wilber's knowledge, and the body become detached, all bleeding and mutilated, at the bridge, how came it that Miss Devoe could afterward, or should afterward, surmount the rail and throw herself into the water. The idea that she could have been kicked over by the horse is dismissed by those who have examined the locality as simply impossible. Besides, how is it that there were no screams, and that Mrs. Proper, although she could see horse, man and buggy so distinctly, and the latter in two different conditions; saw nothing of a body clinging to it . The improbability. Wilber committing the murder rests on his previous good character, and on the fact that no bad feeling was ever known to exist between himself and the deceased; the probability that he did commit the crime is founded on the apparent impossibility that the different things that happened could have happened

Thelastact of the dismal drama occurred two days after Miss Devoe was buried. On the Wednesday succeeding that Monday, Wilber was himself found dead. His body was at the bottom of his own well, into which he had plunged headlong. Did he kill himself out of remore, or because he knew he was suspected. and the circumstantial evidence was so strong against him? Heaven only can tell, for there are no other witnesses, and with Wilber's suicide the knowledge of the secret passes away from the earth. Theories there will be plenty, and plansible conjectures without and but the real heart of the mystery will only be gives up its dead.

TRUTH AT THE BOTTOM OF A WELL

It would appear to be as difficult now as it was in the time of Raleigh to obtain a true account of /anything. It was impossible that statements should be clearer or more definite than those about the existence of a cesspool in Londesborough Lodge, under the closet next to the Prince's bed-room. No such cesspool, however, exists, or ever has existed, except in the imagination of a plumber who informed the author of the statement in the daily papers. Afterreading all the statements pro and con about the drains in Londesborough Lodge, we incline to the conclusion that no such place exists, that it is an imaginary house, invented in order that sewage authorities may fight out their theories by illustration.

M. Tutnols " Sotes on England." (From the Paris Temps.). XXI.—St. James's Park, Richmond, The Docks, AND EAST-END.

Whence comes all this money, and how is it distributed? I shall endeavour to procure the statistics; meantime, let us examine one of the great reservoirs whence gold flows through the people of all conditions, and over the whole country—the Docks of Loncient Rome, as Paris resombles ancient Athens. Ion, Egypt, imperial Rome, indicates an that to-day there are no more slaves before the law; yet frequently man is a slave in fact, and by the constraint of his condition.

. These Docks are prodigious, overpowering; there are six of them, each of which is a vast port, and accommodates a multitude of three-masted vessels. There are ships everywhere, and ships upon ships in rows, show their heads and their swolling breasts, like beautiful fish, under their cuirass of copper. is of 2,500 tons burden; others are 3,000 tons and upwards; some of them hail from all parts of the world, this is the trysting place vessels enter every year, and that on an average, there are from five to six thousand in the docks or the river at one time.

thirty thousand barrels of port. A crane wheeled truck, they slide down an incline to their places, almost without labour. The weight of meat were there. machines work so well that they appear to be living auxiliaries, voluntary slaves. Note that bridge; it weighs an hundred tons; exhalations; troops of pale children nestling jack. There is a quarter for groceries, a bridge, where families, huddled together with Policies issued for long or short periods at quarter for skins and leather, a quarter for drooping heads, shiver through the night; tallow. The cellars and the warehouses are particularly the Haymarket and the Strand colossal. Under their arch, equal to that of in the evening. Every hundred steps one a large bridge, one beholds the peopled and jostles twenty harlots; some of them ask for profound obscurity recede far away. Rem. a glass of gin; others say, "Sir, it is to pay brandt would have found ready-made pic- my lodging." This is not debauchery which tures in their mysterious distances, in the flaunts itself, but destitution—and such desflickering blackness of their choked-up air- titution! The deplorable procession in the holes, in these infinite receptacles where a shade of the monumental streets is sickening; hive of men is moving about. They roll the it seems to me a march, of the dead. In the middle of the cellar a foreman, seated at a small table, makes Houses, Lands, Tenements, &c. grave, and in black hats, walk about superintending in silence. Yet around the capstans are creaking, and sailors in boats scraping or scrubbing their ships. Thus occupied in their working coats, with their i serious air, their phleginatic or wearied faces, they form a pleasing sight; one feels that they are in their right places, every living being, animal or man, is beautiful in his proper place.

Our steward on board the steamboat, many servants, and merchants whom I have seen, do likewise; when, in giving orders and executing them. chattering, exclamations, tokens of impatience, lumbling, and disorder are thus suppressed, the command and the performance gear into each other as quickly and as surely as two wheels.

the images to group and to arrange themselves. I was at the corner of Shadwellbasin, and I gazed upon the slate-coloured river before me shining and exhaling mist; the northern bank winds and bounds the horizon with its blackish fringe mottled with red; a few vessels descend with the supple and slow movement of a sea-bird; their sombre hulls and brown sails balance themselves upon the water which shimmers. To north and south a mass of ships raise their HOUSE. crowded masts. The silence is almost complete; one hears but the strokes of disstant hammers, the vague tinkle of a bell, and the fluttering of birds in the trees. A Dutch painter, Van der Heyden, Backhuysen, would have taken pleasure in beholding this plain of water, the distant tones of brick and tar, this uncertain horizon where stretch the sleeping clouds. I have seen nothing more picturesque in London. The rest is too scrubbed and varnished, or too bustling and too foul.

Shadwell, one of the poor neighbourhoods, is close at hand; by the vastness of its distress, and by its extent, it is in keeping with the hugeness and the wealth of London. Some of them have a relic of neatness, a new garment, but the greater number are in filthy and unseemly tattets. Figure to yourself what a lady's bonnet may become after passing during three or four years from head to head, having been crushed against walls, having had blows from fiets; for they receive them. I noticed blackened eyes, bundaged noses, bloody cheek-bones. The women gesticulate with extraordinary vehemence; but most horrible of all is their shrill, acute, cracked voice, resembling that of an ailing screech-owl.
